" Security in Your Supply Chain"

Please join us for a very educational session on Monday 9/11/06 regarding the impact of 9/11. Our speaker, Barry Wilkins, has led the way in Supply Chain Security with companies and Homeland Security. He will be speaking about the steps that all companies need to take to make the entire supply chain secure.

Barry has assisted over 150 companies in applying for and complying with the Customs Trade Partnership Against Terrorism (C-TPAT). He has conducted or managed over 1000 supply chain security reviews, audits, investigations and re-engineering efforts for manufacturing, distribution, port security and transportation operations worldwide.

Pinkerton Consulting & Investigations has long been regarded as one of the most competent and thorough security consulting firms in the world. A division of Securitas, their experienced professionals have diverse security expertise in threat and vulnerability identification, facility assessment, multiple investigative services, computer and network vulnerability and penetration testing, as well as other security consulting specialties.

Pinkerton assisted U.S. Customs (now Customs and Border Protection, CBP) in developing the C-TPAT guidelines, chaired the Technology Subcommittee of the U.S. Treasury's Commercial Operations Advisory Committee (COAC), and is currently on the COAC's Supply Chain Security Subcommittee Security Advisory Counsel. Many Fortune 500 manufacturing and retail companies turn to Pinkerton for assistance when conducting their comprehensive supply chain security self-assessments and submitting their security questionnaires to CBP. Pinkerton also helps them develop and implement long-term programs to enhance supply chain security and communicate C-TPAT guidelines to the vendors in their supply chains. CBP will provide expedited processing of goods and conveyances at U.S. borders for companies that implement these steps. Shouldn't your company be one of these?
